

3. The Fox and the Grapes

*(A fox.....hungry.....search of food..... sees a vine of grapes
.....hanging high..... goes there.....jumps again and again.....
not reaches the grapes.....jumps again runs away saying,
"The grapes are sour. They are not worth eating.")*

Ans. Once there was a clever fox. He was very hungry. He went out in search of food. Suddenly he saw a vine of grapes. The sight of the grapes made his mouth full of water. He went there. They were hanging high above his head. He jumped again and again to get them. But he could not reach the grapes.

He took some rest. He jumped again but in vain. He became very tired. He thought for some time then he ran away saying, "The grapes are sour. They are not worth eating."

Moral : Grapes, out of reach, are said to be sour.

4. The Wolf and the Lamb

*(A wolf.....hungry and thirsty.....sees a lamb drinking water in a streamwants to eat.....invents an excuse to eat it..... making water dirty.....the lamb
..... down stream invents other pretext lamb
..... abuses last year.....lamb six monthsit must be your parents.....kills the lamb.)*

Ans. One day a hungry and thirsty wolf saw a lamb drinking water in a stream. He wanted to eat the lamb so he went to the lamb and said, "Why are you making water dirty?" The lamb said, "Sir, the water is running from you to me. How can I make water dirty?" The wolf invented other pretext and asked, "Why did you abuse me last year?" The lamb said, "I am six months old, Sir. How could I abuse you?" "Then it must be your parents," saying this he killed the lamb.

Moral : Might is right.
